TECHSAUCE

Brett was an absolutely fantastic closing keynote, an engaging presentation, he is so natural on stage, very conversational. He stayed well beyond his time to answer questions and engage with the audience. Feedback was phenomenal

Brett delivered exactly as represented. The group was energized by his presentation with rave reviews across the board. We'd definitely love to work with him again

Brett did his usual outstanding job. He held the audience's attention and made us all think about the future and our ability to adapt. He received many questions. He stayed through till well after lunch signing books and chatting with attendees

Our high-level attendees are never that easy to impress but given the huge round of applause, the follow up questions and the fact that out of 80 speakers Brett's keynote had the highest rating we've ever had, I would highly recommend him

Brett's books were true inspiration in the early days of NuBank - David Vélez, CEO

TESTIMONIALS

Optimal Humanity: Smart Economies & Emerging Solutions

The Biggest Disruptions to society emerging over the next 20-30 years, and how we might adapt to increasingly disruptive trends such as including Artificial Intelligence, Health Tech and Gene Therapy, Smart Economies and Infrastructure, the impact of Climate Change, Food Scarcity and 1 Billion Eco-Refugees

Towards Bank 5.0: The Algorithmic Bank

In a forward looking glimpse into the world of banking in the 2030s and 2050s, Brett examines how AI based banking will operate, what the consumer experience will be like, how Quantum is going to upend banking security and how most traditional banks won't make the cut.

Can Sci-Fi Predict the Future of Banking, Money, Economics?

In this epic futurist presentation, Brett takes us on a journey through various sci-fi created scenarios of the 2050s how we might tackle the big questions, and why some sci-fi gets it completely wrong.

The Rise of Technosocialism: Strategies for the 21 Century

With AI disruption, techno-unemployment, rising inequality, declining birth rates, and the impact of climate change becoming clear, how will these forces shape the world order that emerges? Brett explores how politics, economics and social cohesion may be thrown on their head.

KEYNOTES

BRANCH TODAY, GONE TOMORROW: The End of Branch Banking as we know it
From Brett's new book due out in early 2025 the research in this new keynote shows that the world of banking has already been turned on its head with the following ground-breaking research notes:

- Bank Branch populations peaked in 2015, and have been in decline globally since
- The world's largest fintechs already serve 30% more people than traditional banks
- Of the Eurozone, G20 and primary banking markets, there's only one country that had any branch increases in the last 5 years.
- Twice the number of people globally use mobile wallets daily compared with plastic cards
- All of the world's fastest growing financial institutions are tech players

THE RISE OF THE CHALLENGERS:
How Neo-Banks Changed the Rules and how the Industry Responded

From the first Internet-only banks like Egg and Jibun bank, to the emergence of the first Fintech Neo-Banks, the first chartered Challenger Banks and the Industry copycats, Brett King takes us on a tour of the decade of disruptor banks. We examine the success stories, and failures, along with why there are so little examples of incumbent success in attempting to replicate these new models.

What does it mean for future market share, for the industry as a whole and for the future of banking?

He advised the Obama administration on Fintech policy and advises regulators and bank boards around the world on technology transformation.

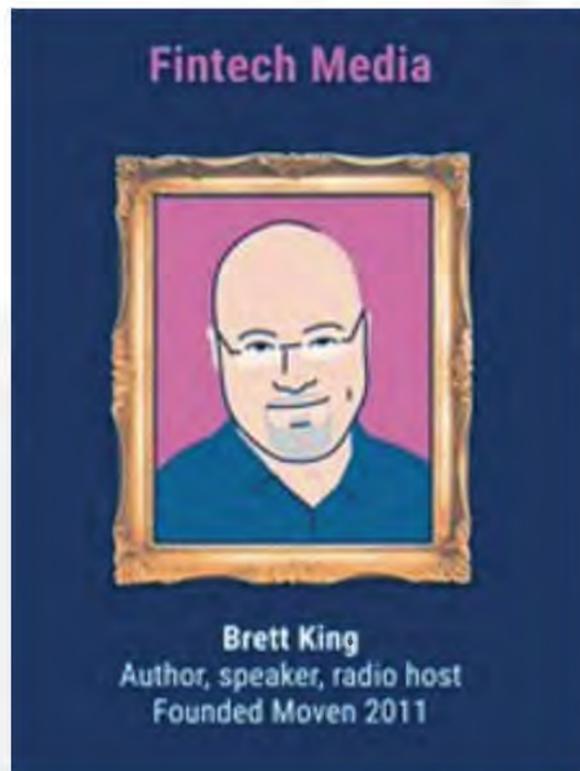

KING OF THE DISRUPTORS

If King is right, surviving in the banking world he sees coming demands a major strategic, even organic, rethinking of what a bank is, how a bank sells, "where" it does business, who it partners with, and even what its relationship to its customers is. You may not like his message, but Brett King puts Moven where his mouth is.

AMERICAN BANKER. Innovator of the Year

"Much like the 19th-century railroad developers who built in uninhabited regions in anticipation of boom towns that had yet to arrive, Brett King's Moven is a mobile-heavy financial services startup that's still waiting on the technology and marketplace to catch up to its vision"
